Intelligence Electronic Warfare Systems

Purpose: This field manual provides description, configuration, and employment level reference data for the Army's tactical IEW systems. It is not intended to replace technical manuals for the systems described, but affords a level of detail of great use to system operators and supervisors, and provides a significant reference tool as well as techniques, tactics, and procedures (TTP) to aid in mission planning and operations.

Scope: This manual describes the capabilities, features and functions of Army IEW systems and IEW communications systems that are unique to Army military intelligence units. It provides information on the development and evolution of the systems, how to deploy and operate the systems, explains the tasking and reporting process these systems, and describe the intelligence products commanders can expect from these systems to support operations at every echelon.

Target Audience: This manual is intended for commanders, staffs, and planners at all echelons, and all personnel in the active Army and Reserve Components who require a detailed knowledge of Army tactical IEW system features, capabilities, and TTP for operations. This information can be used to supplement echelons above corps (EAC) and echelons corps and below (ECB) operations, doctrine, and training.
