Summary

This fact sheet summarizes major demographic and spending trends that characterize the on-going conflicts in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Sierra Leone, and Angola. In each of these conflicts, contention over the control of mineral wealth – particularly diamonds – and other natural resources is regarded as a significant factor fueling hostilities. This fact sheet presents data on refugees; internally displaced persons (IDPs); deaths; child soldiers; approximate percentage of territory held by anti-government rebels; military spending; and international humanitarian spending. This report will be updated as events warrant.

General Caveat on Conflict-related Statistics in Africa

In general, conflict-related statistics – including those contained in this fact sheet – should be treated as rough estimates. This is particularly true for conflicts in Africa, where many governments lack adequate resources to undertake statistical profiling, even in peaceful settings. Many conflict-related figures are derived from statistical projections based on aging data sets (past censuses, etc.), small rapid assessment survey samples, and variable assumptions about demographic profiles resulting from "normal" levels of poverty, disease, access to healthcare, and the like. In many cases, it is nearly impossible to definitively differentiate between the effects of conflict, natural disaster, disease, and general poverty. The figures below are derived from multiple information sources and from studies employing a wide variety of research methodologies. With the above qualifications, the following facts, figures and data sources relating to the three current diamond-related African conflicts are given:

Sierra Leone

Refugees. Approximately 490,000 as of September 2000 (mostly in Guinea, Liberia and Ivory Coast).

Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs). 500,000 to over one million. 300,000 additional displacements due to May 2000 upsurge in fighting.

Deaths. Estimates for total deaths related to conflict since 1991 range between 20,000 and 50,000.

Child Soldiers. 5,000 to 5,400, in direct combat roles. 5,000 or more used in combat support roles.

Approximate Rebel-held Territory. One third to one half of the national territory (multiple press accounts).

Humanitarian Spending. $79 million estimated need for 2001.

Systematic and repeated incidents involving the mutilation, abduction, rape, and other human rights abuses of civilians have been documented by international human rights groups and United Nations (U.N.) agencies. Aggregate totals for such atrocities, however, are not available.

Angola

Refugees. Over 340,000 in neighboring countries (November 2000 estimate).\(^8\)

Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs). 1999: Approximately 1 million newly displaced. 2000: Approximately 338,000 newly displaced; 2.7 million total displaced as of late July 2000.\(^9\)

Deaths. Minimum of 650,000 conflict-related deaths, 1974 through 1999.\(^10\)

Child Soldiers. 5,000-7,000 estimated as of 1997; figure could be substantially higher (various sources).

Approximate Rebel-held Territory. Varies. UNITA guerrilla tactics make much of the country insecure; UNITA has been active in most parts of Angola during the past year, and is believed to effectively control a large area adjacent to the Zambian border.

Military Spending. $1.005 billion in 1999, estimated; $1.2 billion (FY1997/1998).\(^12\)

Humanitarian Spending. $202 million estimated need for 2001.\(^13\)

Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC)

Refugees. 162,000 in Uganda, Tanzania and Zambia (January 2001); estimated 310,000 in these and other neighboring states (November 2000); the DRC hosts 335,800 refugees from neighboring countries (December 2000).\(^14\)

Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs). 1.8 million (November 2000; see footnote 11).

Deaths. In eastern DRC: 200,000 due directly to acts of violence; a total of 1.7 million direct and indirect war-related deaths were estimated. This estimate covers August 1998 through May 2000.\textsuperscript{15}

Child Soldiers. Concise figures not available; child recruitment is frequently reported as being common and widespread; 10,000 child soldiers were estimated to have fought on behalf of the Alliance of Democratic Forces for Liberation in 1997.\textsuperscript{16}

Approximate Rebel-held Territory. 50 to 60\% (multiple press accounts).

Military Spending. $400 million (1999, estimated); $250 million (FY1997);\textsuperscript{17} Commitment authority of U.N. Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC): $141.3 million gross July 2000 through June 2001.\textsuperscript{18}

Humanitarian Spending. $139.4 million estimated need for 2001.\textsuperscript{19}
