utility of force and the overwhelming superiority of the U.S. military resulted in a war plan utilizing relatively few of its resolutions by late 2002, setting the stage for the invasion of Iraq in March 2003.

After the war, no-fly zones were enforced to protect the Kurdish population in the north and the Shia future interventions. As they retreated to Baghdad, Iraqi forces ignited oil wells, presaging the asymmetric